

Removing the caps on the number of broadcast outlets a company is allowed to own would be a terrible blow to free speech. Huge companies are already crushing small and medium businesses as they divide and conquer our airwaves.

Five major companies currently own the lion's share of our media outlets, and to homogenize the market further will greatly narrow the variety of views and opinions being expressed.